Witness Barred At First Trial Of Hiss To Be Heard

Court Rules That William Rosen Will Be Allowed To Give Testimony

HISS TRIAL NOW IN THIRD WEEK

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN (I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Dec. 5.-Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard ruled today that William Rosen, whose testimony was barred at the first Alger Hiss perjury trialwhich ended in jury disagreement-will be allowed to take the stand in the present new trial.

Rosen was in the courthouse under subpoena as a government wit-

He has been identifitd by Whittaker Chambers, as the govern-ment's star witness, as a Commun-ist party member who obtained title to Hiss' 1929 Ford roadster on July 24, 1936. Trial In Third Week The ruling permitting Rosen to take the stand was made at a conference with the opposing lawyers in the judge's chambers.

The trial entered its third week today with Walter H. Anderson, documents chief for the State Department, resuming the stand for further cross-examination.

Anderson last week identified the 47 secret State Department documents which Chambers al-leges Hiss turned over to him in 1938 for transmission to a Soviet spy ring. These are the famous

"pumpkin papers."
Defense Attorney Claude B.
Cross sought to show that others in the State Department could ave obtained the documents from

Anderson admitted that as many as from fifteen to fifty copies of various documents were made, and as many of them as were needed were passed around to properly designated officials with-in the department.

When Officials Resign

(By Holmes Alexander)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 5 .- My heart somehow refuses to bleed for the politico or bureaucrat who makes the great "sacrifice" of working for the government. David Lilienthal and Clark Clifford, both ready to retire, got $17,500 and $20,000, respectively, which is enough, They also got rent-free office suites, as many government-paid steno-graphers as they could use, a whole staff of fetch-and-carry assistants and transportation around town in government owned and chauffeured

Both men, it is well known, lived up to or above their incomes But this was a matter of their own choice. There is no good reason why Atomic Energy or the Tru Deal requires men to ride the Washington social merry-go-round. Especially in the case of Clifford, he could suffer just as thoroughly for the Common Man and write just as good diatribes against "selfish interests" without limbering up at cocktail parties and dinner dances. Both he and Lilienthal deserve all the fun they can get, and both did bang-up jobs in their special niches. But they are not martyrs to a slave-salary law that prevails among government officials.

No Get Rick Quick Proposition

There is a very good set of arguments, I think, for putting govern-ment salaries down to the subsistence level and leaving them there. No man should look to the government to make him rich or even well-off, We became the great nation we are partly because so many of our early officials—Jefferson, Madison, Monroe and Hamilton—died poor. Washington himself would have died the same if he hadn't had the foresight to marry a wealthy widow. No honest man gets rich in politics.

Another advantage of subsistence salaries is that they tend to limit long-serving officials to mediocre and to high-class persons. in-between kind doesn't last long.

We had this year two examples of how men of mediocrity sling like death to Federal pay. Mon Wallgren, a presidential crony, was publicly humiliated when a Senate committee refused to confirm his appointment. But he stuck around until he landed a far less important job on the Federal Power Commission. A man of more pride, spunk and ability wouldn't have done that. But it's fair to say of Wallgren that he will never be dangerous. He can live and die in his post without making much real difference to the country.

Leland Olds, another mediocrity, had to be forcibly separated from the job he held on the same Commission. He is now Federal job-hunting and will probably land something when his name cools off a little, It doesn't matter much, one way or the other

Stick Around For Another Reason

But high-class public servants stick around for another reason General Marshall is perhaps the most conspicuous example of a dedicated man, though there are others like him in obscure positions. You never heard Marshall complaining about his salary as Secretary of State or of the sacrifice he made in serving his country. He never got much money, but he always lived frugally and kept busy. If his health permitted, or even if it didn't, Marshall would come back to any job at any salary, provided only that he felt he was rendering real

Subsistence salaries, it seems certain, would tend to keep all other sorts of men away from Washington—or keep them in constant flux, as is actually the case. They come for a period of years, never intending to make a life's work of the job, and then they drift back into pri-

This is as it should be. Nobody owes these men more than a cordial nod of farewell. Whether they spend five or twenty years in the government, they have made an investment in time which pays off big when they go into business or the professions. Not many of them actually leave Washington. In the telephone book today are men like Harold Ickes, Thurman Arnold and Paul McNutt—all of them one-time White House intimates. Even senatorial lame-ducks like Gerald Nye and Joe Ball find their way back to the Carifornia. Nye and Joe Ball find their way back to the Capital City where they capitalize on their previous positions.

Not Always Primary Cause

Lack of money, although always announced as a reason for quitting a government post, is not always a primary cause. Americans, praise be, are an independent-minded, restless race. We all want to be boss, and there's only one boss in Washington—the President. Every official here is hemmed in with restrictions and regulations which no private businessman would tolerate. Those stenographers and assistants are supplied by the Public Service Commission. The luxury of hollering "You're fired!" is denied every executive below the White House. And while there is competition among all braintrusters and bureaucrats, it is not clean competition. It is sneaky, tattle-tale, dagger-in-the-back rivalry all the way from the Supreme Court down to the humblest bureau the humblest bureau.

Except for the truly dedicated public servants, officials are under great temptation to develop a sense of over-importance. They are told by subordinates, and soon believe, that they are bigger than the job they hold. Yet in two cases, the chairmanships of the Munitions Board and the National Security Resources Board, the top jobs have been vacant for months without damage to the nation. Obscure workers far down the line do the real work.

Someday, perhaps, a retiring official will write such a letter of resignation as this:

"Dear Mr. President: Thanks for giving me that job several years ago. I had a wonderful time. Now that I'm leaving. I don't want you to tell the press that my departure makes much difference. Because, of course, it doesn't. I never felt indispensable or particularly noble working for the government. I ought to thank the country for with sufficient seats in the House of Commons to form a government.

This belief is based on conclusions that will sound familiar to sions that will sound familiar to Americans who will substitute man.

New Offensive Against Hague Agreement In UN

Ukrainian Foreign Minister Says Indonesian People Being Exploited

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Dec. 5. -(INS)-Ukrainian Foreign Minister Dimitri Manuilsky touched off a new offensive in the United Nations Saturday against approval of the Hague agreement for early Indonesian independence.

Manuilsky took the floor of the special U. N. Political committee immediately after the so-called "New Delhi bloc" of nations introduced a resolution recommending that the assembly officially hail the Hague agreement.

Manuilsky charged exploitation of the Indonesian people by the Netherlands and the "oil barons" of the United States. He denied that fighting has ended and claimed that "ferocious" battles are raging in the Jogjakarta area. He declared that the Dutch army and air force in recent mopping-up action killed at least 30,000 Indonesians.

Opposition by Russia to the Hague agreement is based on a campaign by Indonesian Republican leaders to wipe out all out-right communist agitators. Several of the ring-leaders have reportedly been executed.

Hard Coal Workers Set Low Fatality Rate For 11 Months

Deputy Mines Secretary Joseph J. Walsh hailed the Pennsylvania hard coal industry for one of its lowest fatality rates on record.

Walsh said 82 men were killed in anthracite mine accidents dur-ing the first 11 months of 1949, or 0.78 fatalities per million manhours, "the best rate ever estab-lished in a like period."

The state mines official, in a letter to anthracite mine inspectors, mine officials and miners, "we are elated because your fatality rate for the first 11 months of this year is 30 per cent better than the all-time low rate the bituminous coal industry of the nation."
However, Walsh tempered his praise of the industry pointing out that its goal for a better than 0.50 fatality rate this year was impossible to meet.

THIS STALL STORY

SHAKES MAN'S FAITH PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 5-(INS) Walter Bowe told police a "stall" story Saturday that has shaken his faith in human nature, Bowe's car stalled in South fire in his Blue Ridge home. Philadelphia last night.

Along came a stranger who courteously offered to help push the vehicle.

Grunting and sweating, the pair shoved the 1938 heap for a short distance. Then the friendly stranger suggested he get in and keep working the starter while Bowe continued to push. Bowe agreed.

Back he went to his labor and suddenly, the motor turned over. "Is it clicking?" Bowe shouted to the kindly stranger.
"Yes sir-ee," he replied—and promptly drove away, leaving Bowe standing in the middle of the street.

Later, police arrested Alex Hill 28, as the suspected thief

NEW CASTLE NEWS

What's wrong with this picture?

Jack's new platter may be sweet music to Betsy-at the other end of the line. But it could be a sour note to Jack's party-line neighbors, if they should be waiting to use the telephone!

Since you never can tell when you might need cooperation from your party-line neighbors, it pays to treat them with courtesy and consideration.

Here are two suggestions. When you realize that your neighbor is waiting to make a call, hang up in a few minutes and free the line. And when you find the line in use, give the other person a few minutes to finish the call before trying again.

Nothing difficult about that, is there? Yet it helps tremendously to make service better for all concerned!

Three Ways To Stop The Hiccups

GLENDALE, CALIF.-24-year-old Jack O'Leary demonstrates three of the more than 2000 remedies that have been suggested to cure his 17-month siege of hiccups. At left he tries putting straw in his hair before going to bed, and at center, swallowing the handle of a spoon is supposed to do the trick, while at right somebody suggested drinking water through a pencil clenched in his teeth. But O'Leary still hics about once every five seconds, and continues to try "a sure-cure" for hiccups.

Preparing For Erection Of New Packing Plant

Here is shown an artist's drawing of the proposed new packing plant of the New Castle Packing company. The plant will cost approximately $300,000 and when in production will be a modern meat processing plant.

The New Castle Packing company is an organization composed of Abe Cohen, Harry Cohen, Joseph Cohen, Nathan Rosen, Irwin Rosen, and Irving Nixon. Abe Cohen will be the manager of the plant.

Some months ago the company purchased the land from the Greater New Castle Association. Through the co-operation of the city officials considerable red tape was cut and plans ordered for the plant. These plans are the work of Henschein, Evards and Crombie of Chicago, Ill., nationally known designers of packing plants.

The new plant will be located near Mahoning avenue and when completed will be modern in every respect. The company expects to process various kinds of meat, slaughter animals and pack its own products.

Knights-Clippers Have Quit League

CLEVELAND, Dec. 5.—(INS)— The Cleveland Knights and the Baltimore Clippers have dropped out of the Eastern Hockey league due to "lack of public support."

The Knights, who lost their final game of the season, 9-2, to the Toledo Buckeyes yesterday, lost $20,000 in the first two months of play, according to General Manager James Hendy.

The Cleveland entry won four games, lost nine and tied four.
